

Climate Change: Voices from the Developing World

If we are to truly face up to the challenge of climate change, the voices and ideas of those in developing countries need to be heard.

Hosted by Trócaire, speakers from Kenya and El Salvador offer a unique and powerful perspective on this global issue.

Climate change is a global justice issue. Carbon emissions from rich countries have contributed most to climate change, yet it is the poor in developing countries who are being hit hardest by its consequences. This spring, Trócaire is offering the public throughout Ireland a chance to hear from two speakers Dr. Dominic Walubengo and Martha Yvette Aguilar, who have a powerful insight and expertise on the real impact of climate change – coming from two of the countries directly affected.

Galway: Monday March 3rd

7.30pm Galway City Museum, Spanish Arch.

In association with Galway One World Centre.

Cork: Tuesday March 4th

7.00 pm Room 1.01, Brookfield Health Science Building, University College Cork.

In association with UCC One World Society and Environment Society.

Dublin: Wednesday March 5th

7.30 pm Cultivate Centre, Essex St. West, Temple Bar.

In association with Cultivate Centre and Trinity One World Society.

Belfast: Thursday March 6th

7pm Room GEO/0G/029, School of Geography, Archaeology & Palaeoecology, Queen's University Belfast.

For further information contact: campaigns@trocaire.ie or call us on:
+353(0)1 5053278 or 0044 (0)2890808030

Trócaire's ADMIT campaign is asking Ireland and the UK to act now by supporting vital adaptation measures in the developing world and urgently reducing their own emissions. To learn more about the ADMIT campaign or to get involved visit www.trocaire.org/lent